of meals by Catering Establishment) Order, 1947.

1- G-611/10.10.1949

the service etc. of the two courses also limits the consumption to a particular type of meal i.e. can a person take a substantial or subsidiary dish of one style and a subsidiary dish of another style.

Office of the R.

The expressions "substantial dish" and "subsidiary dish" have been defined to mean dishes described as such in the Schedule to the Order. The Schedule contains three different categories under the captions (1) European or Chinese type (2) Moghal type (3) vegetarian type; and under each type a separate list of substantial dish and subsidiary dish has been given. It would, therefore, follow that a substantial dish or subsidiary dish must necessarily be understood with reference to the particular type. What is a substantial or subsidiary dish thus depends upon the type to which it is assigned, the underlying idea being that its nature as such dish would depend upon the type. The object of the grouping is that the dish in the context of that group assumes that particular character. Therefore, it would not be feasible to sever the dish from that context and to combine it with another dish ~~the~~ grouped under a totally different head. The view taken by the Magistrate seems to be correct.

2. In any case I am certain that the case will be taken to the High Court when we will get another opportunity of urging this point and of securing an authoritative pronouncement.
